

Miami Beach beckons Martha Stewart

By Stephanie Smith

February 24, 2014 | 9:22pm

Photo: Getty Images

MORE ON:
MARTHA STEWART

Star snaps of the day

Sightings...

Martha Stewart says homemade presents make best gifts

Architectural Digest celebrates designers at AD100 bash

Martha Stewart's next home could be in Miami Beach.

The domestic goddess dished her love for the city at a DuJour party Friday night during the South Beach Wine and Food Festival at the Ritz-Carlton Residences.

"I would love to get a home here in Miami, it's wonderful," she said in between taking photos with hosts Jason Binn and SoBe WFF founder Lee Schrager. "Miami really does appeal to a very broad spectrum of people, South Americans, Europeans. That is what appeals to me."

Stewart mingled with guests including Ray Kelly, Miami Marlins owners Jeff and Julie Loria, and design legend Vladimir Kagan.